★ Google Fiber plan attracts New York company to Kansas City

Wichita Business Journal
Date: Thursday, February 2, 2012, 7:53am CST

Turnkey Internet Inc. , of Albany, N.Y., closed Wednesday on a deal to purchase North Kansas City-based Internet service provider KCNet Inc.

The Kansas City Business Journal reports the acquisition was spurred by Google Inc. 's plans to test an ultra-fast Internet network in Kansas City. Turnkey says it wanted to be in the Kansas City market when the Google network launches because its focus is on cloud-based data center operations that need access to high-speed Internet services.
